

Snippet: Anglican Mainstream » Blog Archive » Doctors who oppose morning-after pill on conscience grounds...

Link shared on facebook on Apr 30, 2014

Tasmania is not unique in its willingness to establish a religious adherence when it comes to the practice of medicine. "This is a form of unjust discrimination against professionals on the basis of their personal beliefs and, indirectly, a form of discrimination against patients who share the same beliefs and who may wish to be treated by professionals with a sympathetic understanding of their position."

Anglican Mainstream » Blog Archive » Doctors who oppose morning-after pill on conscience grounds...

www.anglican-mainstream.net

Guidelines confirm that doctors and nurses who oppose controversial emergency contraception on 'moral or religious' grounds cannot receive key specialist qualifications

Snippet: Josie Cunningham

abortion: I felt baby kick and couldn't go through with it

Link shared on facebook on Apr 29, 2014

"...when you see an elbow or a foot moving across your bump that's something else. It was more powerful than anything the trolls said to me."

Yep, a lesson in persuasion...

Josie Cunningham abortion: I felt baby kick and couldn't go through with it

www.mirror.co.uk

Controversial Josie describe in her own words why she says the baby kicking her was as if the baby was saying

Snippet: On Facebook – Apr 29 2014

Link shared on facebook on Apr 29, 2014

Abject cruelty as a means to an end. This should not be who we are.

Download Video

LINK

MUST WATCH:

An ex-Navy officer and former G4S guard reveals the truth of Manus Island.

ABC's Four Corners reported on the violent attacks last night.
You can watch the full episode here – <http://ab.co/1h82ylE>

Please LIKE and SHARE this brave, compassionate response to the Abbott Government's cruelty.

Rest

Sitting still, is hard it seems,
When no one's sure what stillness means
To rest, its true, requires great skill
To still the mind, and quiet the will
To rest requires great discipline
A strength, I've yet, to enter in
But in my weakness, I find joy
In daily trying to enjoy
The stillness of the Lord's embrace
The glimpses of my Saviour's face
Upon the bus, in city skies
In cups of tea, in strangers eyes
Songs, and laughter I find best
Draw me into Jesus' rest.

By Megan Howell

Photo Credit: crsan licensed CC-BY-SA

