

Q&A: Sometimes warnings come

Anonymous asks: Sometimes warnings come and if people repent what was promised will not take effect or its effect will be reduced. Warnings are done so that people repent. If they repent, events change. Remember Jonah and Ninevah and Esther who fasted and the decree changed its effect on the Jews.

Another Dr. Owuor question. I am still bemused that my blog has become so popular about this issue as it is still not something that I have a particular interest in.

For those that don't know the context is this: Dr. Owuor is a "prophet" who has a habit of predicting a calamity unless there is some form of repentance. He also has the habit of claiming fulfilment of the prophecy even when the calamity doesn't happen. I first wrote about him when one of his prophecies would have seen a tsunami wipe out my house in Somerset, Tasmania.

So I presume that "Anonymous" is pointing out that the absence of a calamity is not necessarily a derogation of Dr. Owuor's prophetic insight, because if repentance occurs then surely the calamity is avoided as it was with Jonah and Esther.

To which I answer, with a seasoning of sarcasm: Fantastic! I'm glad to see that the church in Australia has truly repented and prepared the way for the Lord! Job done.
